For the Author of my favorite Book

*“In the beginning was the Word,
and the Word was with God,
and the Word was God.”*

— John 1:1

Sofia loved reading more than anything.

She spent all her time in a grand old library that held every book that had ever been written.

Each day, Sofia skipped down the halls and scampered up the shelves, exploring the world of words.

From sunrise until sunset, Sofia spent her time with princesses and penguins, soldiers and spaceships, doctors and dinosaurs.

She knew about everything and everyone.

There was just one problem . . .
Nobody knew her.

An illustration of an open book with a dragon's head behind it. The book is open, showing several pages. The pages are a light purple color, and the cover is a light tan color. The dragon's head is dark blue with a white horn and a white eye. The background is a dark blue color with a pattern of small, light blue book spines.

And every time
she reached the last page . . .
She remembered that she was alone.
